DCBOE Executive Director Miller Stepping Down, Senior Policy Advisor Monica Evans Named New ED

WASHINGTON, DC -- The District of Columbia Board of Elections (DCBOE) today announced that Executive Director Alice Miller has decided to step down as Executive Director effective August 1, 2021 and that Senior Policy Advisor Monica Evans has been named to fill the position.

The changes are effective August 1, 2021. Miller will be staying on with the DC BOE, serving as Senior Policy Advisor to Mrs. Evans.

Monica Evans brings broad and deep experience to the Executive Director position beyond the senior leadership role she has served in since 2019. Prior to the DC BOE, Evans served as Director, Grants Management at the U.S. Election Assistance Commission. She also worked in a senior position at the Department of Health and Human Services Administration for Children and Families and at the Legal Services Corporation, the Corporation for National and Community Service, and the Maryland Governor's Commission on Service.

"Alice Miller's leadership and positive impact on the electoral process in the District of Columbia will be sorely missed. She leaves behind a legacy of exceptional service to the voters of DC and will be missed by myself and the other members of the Board." said DC BOE Chair D. Michael Bennett.

"My time as the Executive Director of the DC BOE has been one of my professional highpoints and I am immensely proud of what the DC BOE team has accomplished for DC voters," said Executive Director Miller. "While I am stepping down from the position with some sadness, I also feel a great sense of pride and accomplishment and look forward to supporting Monica Evans with the challenges that lay ahead. in every way possible."

"I am excited and energized by the new challenge of serving as Executive Director and grateful to the Board for the confidence they have placed in me," said Evans. "Director Miller's shoes will be hard to fill but I am grateful for the amazing work she has done and the foundation she built."
